How many Summers have you? How many Summers have you seen? How many Summers has it been since — Perhaps only last Summer? Summer dresses" . . . Wonder why the years and dates and times of life are measured by Summer?

Autumn is harvest (some places). Fall is melancholy, contemplative, retroactive, retrospective. Imagine someone saying "Well, you've had a few Hallowe'ens, old buddy." — If you look like you've had a few too many tricks and treats, who would be unmannerly enough to suggest it? Or "How many Thanksgivings since you really had your own drum-stick?"
"The girls in their winter woolies"? How many Christmas tree lights have gone PHOONK at the ceremonial moment?

New Years — old year; regret it, forget it and after a night of serpentine and bee-hived seraphim — back to the old grind; hero's birthdays, valentines, shamrocks, colored eggs, mom and pop's days. But Summer — ah — summer. Only one holiday, the celebration of Independence. No one has been able to commercialize this, except perhaps for the flutter of sales on flags, an occasional sparkler and a shower of lights in dusk's evening light. (also hot dogs).

But, oh, Summer, our last legacy from graceful days. A time of delightful pain, all prickly with sun-burn, mosquito bites, sand and that three-leaved thing, which one must sooner or later encounter in order to be a part of nature. A season of circus and balloons, tadpoles and frogs', green secret places; high, hot brown hills. One savors all the waters — lake, spring, pond, creek, river, ocean — the wonderful world of "wet". Don't forget running through the lawn sprinklers if that's the best you can get, and they sometimes have rainbows in them.

If you're as old as I climbing aboard the ice man's truck and stealing ice replete with slivers from the damp floor; slamming of screen doors, chewing sour grass, licking popicles which were endless, cheap and dyed with colors no longer acceptable (5c apiece and guaranteed to stain your middy blouse or white sailor suit for its duration; blending, however, with the grass stains on the knees and elbows).

If your're as young as I; dancing in somewhat damp ecstacy half the night and walking hand-in-hand in the early morning with a young man in a crumpled white suit (his best) toward the sunrise in search of pancakes and waffles for breakfast, starry-eyed and starved.

The scents of Summer, freshly-sliced watermelon and hot coffee, drift-wood fires; the somehow exciting metallic smell that lingers over central valley orchards; early morning lawns cut down in their prime; fogs trailing perfume of cold sea, warm land, wild sage thyme, laurel and bass.

The sights of Summer: discreet knees, unexpectedly and pinkly disclosed. The leaves are silver-sunned on top, never so cool green underneath. Dust has its place, playing point-counter-point with

VISITOR'S GUIDE TO CARMEL

BUT WHAT IS THERE TO DO IN CARMEL ?

Yes sir, ma'am, be glad to take you on a tour of our town. No sir, ma'am, you don't have to ride on the handlebars of our official bicycle, just take my hand and we can walk all the way. No charge no tip (just a tip of the hat if you enjoy it).

Ready for breakfast? Might as well make it leisurely, the shops here don't open too early—everybody takes breakfast seriously in Carmel. Just walk South of Ocean (the main street, you know, named that way because it literally ends in the ocean) and here you will find our justly famous Tuck Box. Yes, it is a genuine quaintery and specializes in freshly baked scones and muffins. See the little patio on the side? You can have a table there, as well, and come back for luncheon and tea if you wish.

Just down the street a few steps you'll find Birgit and Dagmar, where Scandanavian royalty has stopped for a bite. The only thing wrong with their excellent little pancakes with lingonberries is that they have a secret ingredient known as calories. Take a look at their luncheon menu before you leave. Perhaps you might prefer the Hob Nob, just a step away. If your idea of a culinary cloud nine is eggs Benedictine, you have now arrived at No. 9. You may wish to return for their luncheon cheese souffle, which is cloud-like in itself.

Noticed that it's a bit chilly? Sorry that someone led you astay by saying that California is warm in Summer. They forgot to add that does not necessarily mean Northern California. Fortunately, it's easy to acquire a sweater here. May I guide you to Bo Sumner's Sweater Shop, just South of Ocean on Lincoln? We can always drop by Annette and Bud Fuhrman's Sweater Corner, South of Ocean on San Carlos and 8th Avenue.

Now that you're warmed up, how about a good peer, pry and poke session at the Straw Shop. Yes, it is South of Ocean on Lincoln. Why? Well we hardly ever mention it, but there are sunny days and you'll need a straw hat and possibly a bag to match. Picnicking is also a way of life here and I can't think of a better place to pick a picnic basket. Now that subject naturally leads one to thoughts of something to put in the basket. Follow me to the "Mediterranean Market." Here it is at the corner of Ocean and Mission. Take a deep breath! They import that aroma all the way from Italy in Chianti bottles. Try a loaf of French bread, a selection of those imported cheeses. Of course, some salami, and don't pass the tubs of marinated artichokes and Italian mixed salads. Have an olive? Indeed that bottle of wine third from the left on the top shelf is excellent.

Lunch time already? Take your basket to the beach; due West, you know. No picnicking today? Let's see, we've already covered several luncheon spots. Perhaps you'd like the dining room or patio at our Pine Inn. Excellent cocktails in the Red Parlor.

While in California you should dabbie in Mexican food. There is an excellent sampling at Su Vecino, including a pre-luncheon jolt in the Aztec Room. The Jolly Roger provides a substantial lunch with liquid refreshments available, and in spite of the name the prices are not practical.

Time now to relax, siesta, and then call the Carmel Taxi Company to arrange a complete tour of our Peninsula for you — or a specialized tour, depending on what scenic delights appeal to you most. All of the drivers know about exerything everywhere and are delighted to share their favorite views and news on same with you.

Like to rest a bit before we persue the night life of Carmel? Then, let's wait until next week for carousing and carrousel.

Book by Michael Stewart
Music by Charles Stouse
Lyrics by Lee Adams

Directed by Betty Hackett and Clifford Berry

THE STUDIO, Carmel
Every night, Dark Monday

The expression "fun for the whole family" is admittedly a teeth-gritter. In this case, don't grit. It happens to apply to this lemon meringue production, which is toothsome, indeed. We were only sorry that we had not taken a gaggle of young with us. This is definitely a show for a Summer evening; fast-moving, high-spirited, happy as a peach tree full of young sparrows (which it often looks and sounds like).

To dispose of the book, which doesn't much get in the way of the proceedings — it seems there is this mama's boy whose secretary has been waiting more or less patiently for THE question for some eight years. His business is the management of a teen-age singer (Hi, Ricky Nelson and friends!) who is going in the army, who is going to kiss the president of his Sweet Apple, Ohio fan club as a tender parting gesture — ON TV, of course. It seems that her boy friend objects, her family objects. In the course of events everyone reverts to human nature and lives more or less slap-happily for a reasonable time thereafter. So, it is believed, does the audience.

Ruth Jordan Allen in charge of scenic and lighting has skillfully sketched a background which enhances and enables the free movement of the cast. The latter is nicely handled by the directors and by Dale Lefler, choreographer, who has a genius for transforming two left feet into more handily assorted pairs. Betty Hackett's costuming is bright and imaginative. A special delight is the fact that the outfits are crisp and fresh, not having the "do I have to wear this old thing again" look that is the unfortunate plight of so many of those which see nightly usage.

Clifford Berry as Albert, the sheep in lamb's clothing, plays his role with a harried ebullience that reminds one of a happy hare who knows that the trap is there, but the carrot looks SO good.

Hilary Teague as Rose Alvarez, the secretary who suffers for eight long years, is eight years short of the gal she portrays; but with the addition of a clever black wig and excellent stage presence she makes the viewer a believer. Peter De Bono is an excellent Conrad Birdie, the embodiment of every popular rock 'n roll singer. He fails in the charaterization in only one way — his voice is better than most of them. Leila Eden, the fan club president, Kim MacAfee, also has a fine voice and is perfectly cast. Ruth McElroy, as the militant mama of Albert, draws applause at every exit line, as she should. Other high-lighters are John Harrison, as the mayor of Sweet Apple; Martha Dalton, as his wife, who becomes a Birdie fan. Hugo Peabody, Kim's young man, has an unaffected, inept charm that cannot help but remind one.

Feathers . . . From the Shaft

No. 15

By Harry the Fletcher

There's eulogies said for a man when he's dead; when living we take him for granted. His many good deeds remain dormant, like seeds, and only bring flowers when he's planted.

It also is true, though it's nothing that's new, how quick we find fault with our neighbors; we criticize acts quite regardless of facts, or under what stresses he labors.

What somebody drinks or the way that he thinks, gives none of us reason to censure. There's nobody free from reproach, you'll agree, or guiltless of some misadventure.

So, who is to say in a critical way I'm addicted too much or too little to my way of life or my wonderful wife, or to cocoanut-peanut brittle?

EDUCATION

Wanted

More college students receiving their Bachelor's degrees in chemistry, mathematics, metallurgy or physics will be able to take advantage of increased provisions for recognition of superior scholarship in two new Civil Service examinations, Asa T. Briley, Director of the San Francisco Region of the U. S. Civil Service Commission announced today. College students receiving their degrees in these fields who meet superior scholarship provisions may be appointed to positions paying an entrance salary of $6650 a year as compared to $5525 a year for students who do not meet these scholastic standards. Under the Chemist examination, graduates without experience may enter the Federal Service at $5525 or $6650; experienced chemists will be hired at salaries up to $12,845 a year. The other examination will be used to fill positions of Mathematician, Metallurgist and Physicist with entrance salaries of $5525 and $6650 a year. The majority of the positions to be filled from these examinations will be in California and Nevada. A few positions in Hawaii and Pacific overseas locations may also be filled. Further information regarding these examinations and application forms may be obtained from the office of the Director, San Francisco Region, U. S. Civil Service Commission, 630 Sansome Street, San Francisco 11, California.

Write 'em & Reap

Members of Mrs. Maxine Shore's Carmel Adult School class, Writing for Publication, concluded an unusually productive spring term with their third annual banquet, at which forty members and guests were present. Students read original light verse composed for the occasion, and Mrs. Shore was presented with an orchid as a token of appreciation.

Those who celebrated sales of short stories, articles and light verse during the past year include: Betty Antoncich, Sally Green, Leota Heshmati, Nancy Mack, Mona Patrick, Bob Singhaus and Wanda Parrott. Another member of the class, Helen Bratton, has just sold her first novel, "It's Morning Again", to David McKay Co., New York. The book is scheduled for publication this fall.

EVENTS

"Gold Diggers" at MPC

Philip Chamberlin, Western vice president of the American Federation of Film Societies, will lecture on "Silent Comedy and Musical Comedy" Friday, 12 July, 8 p.m. in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall.

His lecture, second of a series of summer programs on "The American Film," is open to the public without charge. Tickets may be obtained at the switchboard in the MPC Administration Building.

Chamberlin, who was founding director of the NATO European Cultural Center at The Hague, Holland, and director of the Scandinavian Seminar, organized and staged the Peninsula's first film festival and seminar last August at MPC.

To illustrate musical comedy, Chamberlin will screen excerpts from "On the Town," a Stanley Doner film, and the beloved "Gold Diggers of 1933," with Dick Powell and Rudy Keeler. A rare Chaplin two-reeler will demonstrate some of the principals of silent comedy.

BUSINESS

McCreery Merger

P. A. McCreery Co., L. E. Allaire, and George L. Tomlinson today announced the merger of their insurance agencies. The new firm will be known as P. A. McCreery, Allaire, Tomlinson & Co. The consolidation is able to write all lines of insurance, both domestic and foreign.

The active proprietors of this new group are: P. A. McCreery, a former mayor and long time resident of Carmel; his son, Lew McCreery, who, after service in the Marine Corps as a lieutenant, joined his father in the business; L. E. Allaire, a prominent member of an old Monterey family, who is very active in local and civic affairs in the Carmel Valley, and George L. Tomlinson, an active participant in the political activities of the area, who has the distinction of being the first insurance man in Carmel to operate a world-wide insurance brokerage firm.

The firms insurance manager will be Donald C .Cummings II., the son of Donald C. Cummings, Sr. of Carmel Valley.

The new firm will have their office in Carmel on Dolores between Ocean and 6th Streets. A branch office will be maintained in the Village of Carmel Valley.

Financial Note

To celebrate Independence Day, thieves liberated a total of $53 from two available wallets, 4 July; one extracted from a car parked at the foot of Ocean Avenue, the other from one at San Antonio and 8th. Remember the days when merchants left their doors unlocked when they went out to lunch — and no one had that much money in their wallets anyway?).

ART

Surrealist and the Egg

The current exhibit at the Laky Galleries is a showing of the paintings of Lodewyk Bruckman, Dutch Surrealist.

Together with his twin brother he trained at the Royal Academy at the Hague, first turning his attention to stage design. His works are in permanent collections throughout the United States. The form and substance of the egg seem to hold a particular fascination for him.

Interior: Think purple.

Bob Holmes, manager.

The New Carmel Creamery, which is now an old-fashioned ice cream parlor, opened last week at the Ocean and San Carlos address of the former Hilbert's Creamery. Featuring both counter and table service, with a full menu, the establishment is open from 7:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. Food to go is also available. The traditional homemade ice cream produced on the premises is featured hand-packed or bulk-packed.

The new owners are Carmel Creamery, Inc.

Purple is the highlight of the handsomely remodeled decor, utilizing a special paint imported from France.

The building, adjacent to the Standard Service Station, has a Carmel history dating from the time that it was the show room of Ford motor cars, the only dealers of American automobiles ever in the area. Lewis Levinson, father of Howard Brunn of Carmel's "Entrepot," was the owner. Later the building housed both Bluett's and Konrad's Creameries. The signatures of all three previous owners were discovered when the outside of the building was being cleaned for repainting.

EVERY PARENT needs this book to guide him in the training of his children

These are not easy days for parents. There appear to be many conflicting forces outside the home that would nullify the good that parents hope to accomplish for their children.

Thousands of conscientious parents have turned to the truths in the Bible and in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy and have found comfort and guidance in bringing up their children.

Science and Health may be read or examined, together with the Bible, at any Christian Science Reading Room. Or it may be purchased at $3.

The Sur Coast

By ELIZABETH FULLER JONES

At the base of a steep, redwood filled canyon wall, a dozen miles south of Carmel on Highway One, then a few miles up Palo Colorado Canyon, is a unique and interesting house, recently completed for Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Jobson and family of Burlingame.

This redwood board and batten house with its bold, steeply shaped roof, was designed by architects, Charles W. Moore, A.I.A., Donlyn Lyndon, William Turnbull, Jr. and Richard Whitaker to meet a realistic budget, accommodate a large family (parents, grandparents and children), and designed to be a dwelling to be lived in with joy.

The house seems to have accomplished its purpose and was judged so as an honor award house in the eighth annual Homes For Better Living Awards Program sponsored by the American Institute of Architects and House and Home and Life Magazines.

The thoughtful planning of this 900 square foot week-end home, floating on concrete piers at the edge of Palo Colorado Creek, has a 32 foot long living area and a ceiling height of 32 feet, reaching to a central skylight. Bed alcoves are provided off the living area and on an upper balcony.

General building contractor for this intriguing house, situated on a two acre parcel of land was Roy K. Hubbard of Monterey. Except for a cedar shake roof and interior panels of painted plywood, and structure is entirely of redwood.

Photographs and a plan of this award winning project is shown in the July 1963 issue of House and Home Magazine, a management magazine of the housing industry.

The Big Sur Cookbook with over a hundred pages of time tested, tempting recipes is now on sale at the motels, restaurants, gift shops and other places of business in Big Sur. It is available, too, at the Wells bookstore in Carmel and Lyons in San Francisco. This spiral bound volume with its attractive pen and ink drawing on the cover (a glimpse of the Sur country) is the result of many years of thought and work by the members of the Big Sur Grange, and friends of the Grange in Big Sur. It is dedicated to all of the good cooks of Big Sur who joyously shared their favorite recipes for this project, and dedicated too, to the memory of Mrs. John M. (Florence) Pfeiffer "whose excellent cooking and warm hospitality increased the pleasure of many an early visitor to Big Sur". A little rhyme, Mrs. Pfeiffer often quoted is included: "Man can live without music, and live without books; but civilized man cannot live with cooks".

A brief history of Big Sur appears at the beginning and on a page following, a poem entitled "California Flowers" by Florence Pfeiffer.

Bev-Ron Publishing Company of Kansas City, Missouri are the publishers of this original volume, which is selling rapidly to souvenir collectors and visitors in the Sur Country. These are pages devoted to suggestions for a canape tray, wild game preparation, food quantities and suggestions for large picnic gatherings, temperature tests for candy making, reducing diets, etc. Special sections are devoted to soups, salads, vegetables, hor d'oeuvres, casseroles, cakes, breads desserts, etc., and the names of those sharing the recipes are included. For instance: did you ever make a Zucchini-Rice Casserole? Mary Post Fleenor has given her prize directions for making one. A Palo Colorado Beef Stew is suggested by Mrs. Electa Grimes. A page from the Meat, Fish, Poultry section includes favorites of Emil White, Marty Hartman, Norman Harnett and Nicholas Roosevelt, and in the bread section Lulu M. Harlan tells how to make a Fresh Apple Loaf; under the salad group, a Golden Salad by Marilyn Moe, and Pat Hettich, Howard Welch, Peggy Mac Whinney, Mary Fee and many, many more tempt you with delicious sounding desserts and main dishes.

Special racks for display of the Big Sur Cookbook have been made by Grover Meyrose, of native woods, and are a fitting compliment to this well-done publication.

Just published by R. E. Larson of Big Sur is a brochure entitled "This Is Big Sur California", with a dozen or more excellent photographs, a map, information on the Los Padres National Forest, Pfeiffer-Big Sur State Park, listing of motels and restaurants and includes answers to the twenty most frequently asked questions about the Sur Country. One of the questions: "Where is the art colony?" Answer: Only successful artists can afford to live here, and they aren't much for each other's company anyway, so they're scattered widely also. There is no 'art colony', as such, but the works of some local artists are on display at the Coast Gallery and the Big Sur Bazaar."

The full summer program is in operation at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park, thirty miles south of Carmel on Highway One. The roll call system, for occupany of the 218 camp sites within the park, is now in affect which means that those going to the park to camp for an over-night, or longer period, should make their intentions known to the ranger on duty as soon as they arrive. Roll call is held twice each day, at 10:00 in the morning and 3:00 in the afternoon, and sites are assigned on a first come, first served basis. As of this writing there is not a long waiting period, but as the summer season progresses there may be a one or two day wait for space. Until the end of the Labor-Day week end there is a seven-day limit for one's stay within the park.

A maximum of eight people may occupy one campsite and there is a charge of $1.00 per car per night. Day use of the park is 50c per car.

The pool is open from 8:00 a.m. until 7:00 p.m., and each evening there is a campfire program at 8:30. The park naturalist and staff are in charge of the evening programs which include talks about the flora and fauna of the area, slide shows, community singing, information from members of the California Highway Patrol, etc.

Each day there are nature walks. Notices of these walks, areas covered, are posted within the park.

The nine permanent members of the Pfeiffer Big Sur Park staff, together with their many seasonal staff members, earnestly, joyously go about their work of caring for the more than eight hundred acres under their jurisdiction. Because of the extremely heavy use of this particular state park, many, many hours of each day staff members spend in keeping clean and neat the camping areas and trails. If visitors, campers and all those who come to the park to enjoy its beauty, take part in its activities and use its facilities would become more conscious of their individual responsibility of keeping this, their park, in a clean, orderly condition, staff members would have more time (and there would be more funds available) to develop park areas for greater enjoyment of the visiting public.

The Great Securities Mystery . . .
Complete Report of Congressional Investigation

Authorship of the precaution of slitting retired envelopes was claimed by Bertram. This was clearly not true. Bank officials said the practice was well established before Mr. Bertram came to the Bank, which was long before he was assigned to the vault. It is common knowledge that the practice was used in banks and other businesses, even before the establishment of the Bank. As Mr. Bertram said, it was just commonsense. There are some acts that are so simple, so common, so elemental, that not even the Federal Government needs to formalize, print, and bind it in a manual, such as "wear clothes to work" and "empty all currency from envelope before burning the envelope" and "don't take any money home."

In the first colloquy between Representative Reuss and retired custodian Bertram in the majority report concerning a "practice" of removing the securities from retired envelopes before destruction, Mr. Bertram stated, in effect, that a written instruction to this effect would be ridiculous and unnecessary in the extreme — that it was just plain commonsense to remove the valuable certificates from the envelope before destroying the envelope.

Mr. Talcott. If there hadn't been any instruction concerning destroying the old envelope, what would you have done with it?

Mr. Bertram. I would have burned it the same way (p. 35 of hearing).

Bertram also said that there was no such instruction before the disappearance but that there is such a written instruction now. The fact is Bertram does not know. He retired before the disappearance was discovered, has not been back to the vault since, and has not seen any such manual or instruction.

Mr. Talcott. Are you familiar with the new manual?

Mr. Bertram. No; I have not been in the vault since I retired (p. 35 of hearing).

On one occasion Bertram said he couldn't recall a time when he did not slit the old envelope. On another occasion Bertram said he always slit the old envelope. But he also told the auditor, Mr. Barbonchielli, that he did tear, or could have torn, the envelope on the particular day. He also told Mr. Barbonchielli, in the presence of the general auditor, Mr. Hartlin, that he could have torn the envelope rather than slitting it (pp. 113, 114, and 115 of hearing). Mr. Bertram also testified that he slit the envelopes 99 times out of 100, and this time he didn't know whether he slit it or not (pp. 24 and 114 of hearing).

Mr. Reuss. Let me clear this up. Is it not your testimony that so far as you know it was your invariable practice to split the envelope in such a fashion that the entire innards of the envelope were bare, and that you never, so far as you know, deviated from that practice by such methods as tearing it down the middle?

Mr. Bertram. That is correct p. 40 of hearing).

Mr. Vanik. What did you do before the new rule?

Mr. Bertram. Well, 99 out of 100 times I slit them down the side (p. 24 of hearing).

Mr. Scott. During the course of the investigation, either in the last few days, or since this disappearance, did you ever tell any officer or other employee in this bank, that you sometimes tore an envelope from top to bottom?

Mr. Bertram. I think when I was talking to Mr. Barbonchielli, that is where he got the impression of it.

Mr. Scott. Did you tell him or did not?

Mr. Bertram. No; he must have misunderstood me at the time, because I said I split them right down the middle (p. 40 of hearing).

Finally, I wish to quote the record of Bertram's last testimony before the subcommittee. This appears on pages 114 and 115 of the hearings. As introduction to his recall to the witness stand the quotation begins with the immediately prior interogation on page 113 of the hearing of Mr. Barbonchielli, vice president of the San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank.

Mr. Barbonchielli. On August the 13th, Mr. Bertram was interview in my office with the general auditor and the representative of the Board of Governors for the Division of Examination.

At that time, it was indicated that it could have been possible that he had torn the envelope rather than slitting it.

Mr. Reuss. You were here in the hearing room this morning when Mr. Bertram said that you had possibly misunderstood him, and that at no time had he intended to say that he did anything other than slit the envelope, and that in fact, irrespective of what you understood, he never did anything but slit the envelope.

Mr. Barbonchielli. That is what the gentleman said this morning. However, the statement was made in my office, with others present, that he may have torn the envelope, and not slit it. That is the point I wish to make.

Mr. Reuss. Yes, you have made the point, but his testimony this morning is that he never tore the envelope, but always slit the envelope, and that if he gave a different impression in conversations at any time in the past, it was a mistaken impression. You heard his testimony to that effect, did you not?

Mr. Barbonchielli. Yes, I did, but now we have two versions.

Mr. Reuss. We have two versions of what he said in the conversation with you on August 13. We have only one version, however, of what he said his uniform practice was over the past 15 years.

Mr. Talcott. This man is trying to say Mr. Bertram said something different to him on another occasion. I think we have to evaluate the testimony of both.

Mr. Vanik. We can do that in Washington.

Mr. Reuss. On the question of whether you were justified in obtaining the impression that you did on August 13, of what Mr. Bertram said, there are indeed two versions, yours and Mr. Bertram's. On the question of Mr. Bertram's habitual practices for the past 15 years of slitting the envelope, it seems to me the record speaks for itself, and that is Mr. Bertram's testimony.

Mr. Talcott. Mr. Barbonchielli couldn't testify what Mr. Bertram's practice was for 15 years. Mr. Bertram is sitting over there, and he seems to be nodding agreement.

Mr. Reuss. I think we will go on with our examination.

Mr. Barbonchielli. I think this point is important. If an envelope is pulled open, it is not possible or probable that securities will remain, and if the envelope is torn down the middle in this manner (indicating)—

Mr. Reuss. It is entirely possible that a security might be in there.

Mr. Barbonchielli. I think that is an important point to make. I saw a demonstration on this with you gentlemen, and I could put on another demonstration, if you so wish.

Mr. Reuss. I think it is very obvious that if you put your mind on it you can tear an envelope in such a manner that you would not tear the securities. I think you can take judicial notice of that.

Mr. Bertram, will you step up here, please.

Do you care to add anything to your testimony?

Mr. Bertram. I think this morning what I said was 99 times out of 100 I slit them, as you recall, and this time I said I didn't know whether I slit it or not.

Mr. Reuss. Mr. Bertram, let me ask you this question. You left the hearing room this morning at lunchtime?

Mr. Bertram. Yes, sir.

Mr. Reuss. Whom have you seen between the time you left the hearing room and the present moment among personnel of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco?

Mr. Bertram. No one.

Mr. Reuss. You haven't discussed this case with Mr. Swan or Mr. Barbonchielli?

Mr. Bertram. No, sir.

Mr. Reuss. How about the first vice president?

Mr. Bertram. No, sir.

Mr. Reuss. How about general counsel?

Mr. Bertram. No, sir.

Mr. Vanik. You didn't even think about the case?

Mr. Bertram. When I got through with my testimony, that is all.

Mr. Reuss. And you haven't had any conversation or contact with anyone since then?

Mr. Bertram. No.

Mr. Reuss. Where did you have lunch?

Mr. Bertram. In the cafeteria.

Mr. Reuss. By yourself?

Mr. Bertram. With Mr. Lenz.

Mr. Reuss. Any other employees or officers of the bank?

Mr. Reuss. No, nobody else.

Mr. Reuss. Now, I want to get your testimony again. What was your practice over the 15 years with respect to the tearing of envelopes?

Mr. Bertram. Slit them.

Mr. Reuss. Slit them, not tear them?

Mr. Bertram. Not tear them.

Mr. Reuss. You realize that tearing them wouldn't be any good, because securities would be destroyed?

Mr. Bertram. That is right.

Mr. Reuss. And you didn't tear them?

Mr. Bertram. No.

Mr. Vanik. To your best recollection, did you ever tear them?

Mr. Bertram. Ninety-nine out of one hundred times I slit them.

Mr. Reuss. Did you ever tear them?

Mr. Bertram. I can't say.

Mr. Reuss. You have no recollection of ever tearing one?

Mr. Bertram. No.

Mr. Talcott. You can't remember whether you did tear one?

Mr. Bertram. No.

Mr. Talcott. Can you say you never tore an envelope?

Mr. Bertram. I don't recall, as I told Mr. Barbonchielli before.

Mr. Talcott. Mr. Bertram, didn't you tell him, while in his office, that you did slit it? I didn't mean to say 'slit.' Didn't you tell Mr. Barbonchielli and his counsel, who was with him, that you did tear it, or you could have torn it, on that day?

Mr. Bertram. Yes.

Mr. Reuss. But you, however, are testifying now that so far as you know, while physically you could have done it, just as physically you could tear it as well as slit it?

Mr. Bertram. Yes.

Mr. Reuss. In fact, it has been your uniform practice not to tear it?

Mr. Bertram. That is right.

Mr. Reuss. And that you have never to your knowledge torn an envelope, rather than slit it?

The Great Mystery . . .

Mr. Bertram. That is right.

Mr. Reuss. Thank you very much.

Now, I would like to have Mr. Pausch come forward for a very brief examination.

Mr. Bertram on one occasion testified (p. 29 of hearing):

Mr. Reuss. If I were to tell you now that, happily, this morning the $7.5 million of U.S. securities had been recovered, that it had been misplaced through some accident, and was now back in the custody of this bank, you, of course, would be happy, would you?

Mr. Bertram. And how!

Later he also testified (p. 34 of hearing):

Mr. Talcott. If you were told that this morn, rather than finding them, as Mr. Reuss has suggested, that Mr. Reuss and I had discovered some scientific method of determining from the ashes that in fact they had been incinerated, you would be happy, would you not?

Mr. Bertram. Yes.

Mr. Talcott. In fact, you would be more happy about that than if they were found?

Mr. Bertram. I don't want them to show up.

Bertram, as the record shows, was a witness who could easily be led into conflicting answers. There were other active custodians presently employed and who were actually on duty when the loss was discovered. None of these was called.

The matter of notification to member banks or the general public of the disappearance is, in my opinion, a matter of judgment to be exercised by the bank officials according to the facts prevailing at the time. Facts and situations will vary. Congress should not shackle the system with some special law on this subject. With the benefit of hindsight, reasonable, objective people will concur that the Bank used superb judgment in this instance. Also I do not believe Mr. Montgomery or any bank official violated any duty, obligation, or trust in connection with the newspaper article or the timing of it. I would have preferred more accuracy in the account and more discretion in the headlines.

Another phase of our investigation, which had little relevancy to the disappearance of the certificates concerned the publication of material relative to the incident. Ed Montgomery, a noted San Francisco reporter, claims to have learned of the incident indirectly from a person who overheard a remark of a Bank employee (not an officer) in a San Francisco bar (the "traditional" source of a reporter's "confidential" information). There were more than 700 employees in the San Francisco Reserve Bank. It is remarkable that reports of the incident were not more widely circulated.

I believe the Bank and Mr. Montgomery both performed admirable public service in their respective fields. Any announcement by the Bank or our committee would have been a disservice to the banking community and damaging to the delicate condition of the unrestricted negotiability of our negotiable instruments.

The investigations by the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco and the Secret Service were not perfunctory. When I learned that a representative of the bonding company was present at the hearings I thought it would be relevant and of importance to have his testimony inasmuch as the company would suffer a $500,000 loss should it be necessary for the company to meet a claim under the bond that had been issued to the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco.

Mr. Reuss. I will interrupt you for just a moment. Is Mr. Pausch here? We will not require your presence any longer, Mr. Pausch.

Mr. Pausch. Thank you, sir.

Mr. Talcott. Who is Mr. Pausch?

Mr. Reuss. He is from the Fidelity Co.

Mr. Talcott. I believe I would like to ask him a few questions. For instance, do they consider this closed?

Mr. Reuss. Very well. Will you wait a few more minutes, Mr. Pausch (p. 109 of the hearing).

I quote from the subsequent testimony of Mr. Richard Pausch, assistant secretary, Claims Department, Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, which appears on pages 116 and 117 of the hearing:

Mr. Vanik. Are you satisfied with the extent of the investigation that has been conducted?

Mr. Pausch. Yes; we are.

Mr. Vanik. And as far as this loss is concerned on which you may be liable to the extent of $500,000, you feel that everything that should be done to complete the investigation has been done?

Mr. Pausch. That is correct.

Mr. Talcott. There is another matter.

Mr. Vanik. I have the witness now.

Mr. Talcott. I apologize.

Mr. Vanik. Do you feel there is any need for asking the FBI to enter this case? They could if we wanted them to.

Mr. Pausch. No, sir; I don't think so. I feel there is'nt any need.

Mr. Vanik. You feel that you are absolutely safe on your liability under this bond, as far as your company is concerned?

Mr. Pausch. I can't say that. There could be a loss under the bond in the event the certificates are ever presented.

Mr. Vanik. In your opinion, is there anything more that should be done by either the Secret Service or the FBI to help further investigate the loss of these securities on which you have this liability?

Mr. Pausch. No; I don't think there is anything more necessary at this time.

Under date of May 10, 1963, a syndicated article by Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott appeared in the Oakland (Calif.) Tribune stating in part:

While the three House probers, headed by Representative Henry Reuss, Democrat, of Wisconsin, will withhold their verdict on what happened to the seven $1 million and five $100,000 bonds, they will blister both Treasury and Federal Reserve officials for the lackadaisical and inept handling of the search for the securities.

The Treasury will be rapped for inexplicably failing to promptly and forcefully use all Federal and local resources to uncover what had happened to the bonds.

The Federal Reserve Board will be castigated for (1) secreting the loss of the bonds for more than 6 months, and (2) failing to notify other banks to be on watch for them. San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank officials will be blasted for the astonishing lack of security that prevailed there in the handling of bonds running into the hundreds of millions.

This article appeared prior to the subcommittee holding its first and only executive session on May 14, 1963, to consider a proposed draft of its report. I think it is obvious I did not "leak" the story.

BURT L. TALCOTT

APPENDIX

BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM
OFFICE OF THE CHAIRMAN
Washington, April 1, 1963

HON. WRIGHT PATMAN,
Chairman, Banking and Currency Committee,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Chairman: As you have requested, I am enclosing a copy of a report on the apparent inadvertent destruction of certain Treasury certificates of indebtedness at the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco in the spring or summer of 1962.

The report is also being furnished to the Honorable Dante B. Fascell, chairman of the Legal and Monetary Affairs Subcommittee of the Committee on Government Operations, and to the Honorable Burt L. Talcott, in response to their requests.

No monetary loss has been suffered in connection with the disappearance of these certificates of indebtedness and, as discussed more fully in the report, the investigations of the incident lead to the conclusions that the certificates were destroyed by burning and that no monetary loss will be suffered by any party.

Sincerely yours,
Wm. McC. Martin, Jr.

APPARENT INADVERTENT DESTRUCTION OF CERTAIN TREASURY CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS AT THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO

SUMMARY

Twelve United States Certificates of Indebtedness aggregating $7.5 million disappeared from the vault of the head office of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco some time between May 29 and August 8, 1962. The certificates were series B-1963 with interest at 3¼%, dated May 15, 1962, and due May 15, 1963, and comprised seven for $1 million each (serial numbers 411 through 417) and five for $100,000 each (serial numbers 2524 through 2528). Attached to each certificate were two interest coupons covering two semiannual interest payments and bearing corresponding serial numbers.

The Board of Directors of the Reserve bank, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Treasury Department, and the Secret Service were promptly notified, and exhaustive investigations were made by all concerned. There has been absolutely no evidence to indicate that the certificates were intentionally removed from the Bank's vault.

Coupons attached to the certificates were due November 15, 1962, but none was presented for payment. This strengthens the conclusion, previously indicated by other evidence developed in the course of the investigations, that the certificates were accidentally destroyed and there will be no monetary loss.

In fact, a review of the past 10 years shows that the Reserve banks have had custody of millions of pieces of marketable Government securities aggregating hundreds of billions of dollars without any resulting financial loss.

EVENTS PRECEDING INVESTIGATIONS

The Federal Reserve Bank, acting as fiscal agent of the Treasury Department, issued the certificates involved to a member bank on May 15, 1962, in accordance with the member bank's subscription to the Treasury's offering. Pursuant to instructions of the member bank, the certificates upon issue remained in the Reserve Bank's vault to be held as part of the collateral pledged by the member bank for loans, discounts, and advances. They were enclosed in an envelope together with other securities of various issues which the member bank had previously pledged as collateral for the same purpose. The envelopes used in the vault for holding securities have linear rulings on their face for recording receipts and withdrawals and the current balance of the contents.

On May 29, at the request of the member bank, these certificates were withdrawn from collateral for loans, discounts, and advances and transferred into Treasury tax and loan collateral. Evidence indicates they were withdrawn from the envelope holding collateral for loans, discounts, and advances and transferred into the envelope holding collateral for the member bank's Treasury tax and loan account, as the serial numbers of the certificates were shown on both the withdrawal and deposit entries.

On May 31, it became necessary to make two withdrawals from the member bank's Treasury tax and loan collateral to consummate two delivery orders received from the member bank. These withdrawals consisted of $1 million and $5 million Treasury notes G-1962.

Inasmuch as the recording space on the face of the envelope which contained the Treasury tax and loan collateral was completely filled, it became necessary to start a new envelope to reflect these withdrawals. This necessitated the transfer of all the securities pledged by the member bank for its tax and loan account — including the certificates in question — from the old to the new envelope. This would have involved the transfer of 157 pieces of collateral in the amount of $49,520,000. The old envelope was then discarded.

On August 8, the member bank instructed that the certificates involved be withdrawn from its Treasury tax and loan collateral and delivery made through the wire facilities of the Federal Reserve System to a securities dealer in New York City. (This procedure would have involved the return of the certificates to the general stock held for the Treasury Department at the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco and the issuance of an equivalent amount from the general stock held for the Treasury at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.) The vault custodians received the instructions at about 11 a.m. and found that the particular certificates were not in the envelope which contained the member bank's Treasury tax and loan collateral. They made a preliminary check in an effort to locate the certificates on the possibility that they might have been misfiled. The supervising officers and the General Auditor of the Reserve Bank were notified about 12:15 p.m. that the certificates could not be located.

To discharge its obligation to the member bank, the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco completed the transaction in the regular manner, except that it was unable to restore to the general stock of the Treasury Department held by it certificates equivalent to those issued by the New York Reserve Bank. The Treasury Department is fully aware of this action.

INVESTIGATIONS

Immediately upon being notified that the certificates were unaccounted for, the General Auditor commenced a complete audit of all securities held in the vault at the head office of the Reserve Bank. The audit included not only a physical count of the securities in the vault to check them against the respective ledger controls, but also a thorough inspection of the physical premises, an inspection of the trash accumulation which is ordinarily retained for 1 month before burning (the trash then on hand dated back to July 11), and a review and analysis of the records of securities transactions in an effort to determine that the particular securities (as identified by the serial numbers) had not been delivered out of the vault in connection with any other transaction.

On Friday, August 10, 1962, when it became clear that the certificates could not be located the Board of Directors of the Reserve Bank, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Treasury Department, and the United States Secret Service were all notified.

The Board of Governors promptly sent to San Francisco the Assistant Director of its Division of Examinations who has responsibility for examinations of the Federal Reserve Banks to make an on-the-scene review of the circumstances of the matter and the audit and other investigative procedures employed. He arrived at San Francisco on Sunday, August 12, and remained until Thursday, August 16. During this period, he reviewed the scope of the investigation made by the internal auditing staff and the procedures employed, reviewed the Reserve Bank's established procedures for the handling and safekeeping of securities, observed the execution of such procedures, and discussed various aspects of the case with officers of the Bank who were familiar with the matter, the General Auditor, and the vault custodians and other personnel who handle securities. From these reviews and discussions, it appeared that all possibilities that might explain the disappearance of the certificates had been considered and investigated.

The U.S. Secret Service made its own investigation of the matter, as further referred to below.

INVESTIGATIVE CONCLUSIONS

The following excerpt is quoted from the Secret Service's report dated October 10, 1962:

"The investigation disclosed no evidence indicating the twelve missing Certificates of Indebtedness were intentionally removed from the main vault at the Federal Reserve Bank. Seventeen present and former employees given polygraph examinations, and no guilty knowledge established.

"In view of the facts developed during the investigation and the results of the polygraph examination it appears probable that the certificates were inadvertently left in the used envelope when the other material was transferred, and destroyed when instructions concerning the handling of the used envelopes and waste material were not followed to the letter."

The finding of the Secret Service accords with the conclusions of the other investigations; namely that the certificates were inadvertently left in the envelope discarded when the transfer of May 31, previously described, was consummated, and were subsequently incinerated with waste material.

In describing the circumstances which support this conclusion the physical dimensions of the vault envelope and of the certificates seem significant. The envelope in which the certificates were contained was of heavy stock, 12 inches high by 16¼ inches wide. The certificates were 4½ inches high by 11 inches wide. Other types of marketable Treasury issues, particularly notes and bonds, are considerably larger in size, the top to bottom dimensions being not less than 6 inches. Certificates of indebtedness of this type customarily were filed as the last item in the envelope, behind the various other kinds of collateral that might have been enclosed. As previously mentioned, the Treasury tax and loan collateral pledged by the member bank which owned the missing certificates included more than 100 pieces of other issues. In view of the small size of the certificates of indebtedness relative to the other items in the envelope it is believed that in transferring the holdings from the old to the new envelope on May 31, 1962, the custodian could have failed to grasp the smaller certificates in his fingers, and that they therefore remained in the old envelope subsequently incinerated with other waste material. (Trash is burned on the premises of the Reserve Bank and by its employees.)

OTHER PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES

On August 13, 1962, the Treasury Department furnished all Federal Reserve Banks a list of the serial numbers of the missing certificates and requested that they be on the lookout for presentment of these certificates (for exchange or other purpose). All Reserve Banks and Branches also made a check of the certificates of indebtedness held in their custody to ascertain that the missing items had not come into their possession.

On October 16, 1962, the Treasury Department requested all Federal Reserve Banks and Branches to watch out for interest coupons from the missing certificates covering interest due November 15, 1962, in case they were presented for payment. The Treasury Department itself has, of course, alerted its employees to inspect certificates or coupons of the B-1963 issue received by it for processing to determine whether they include any of the serial numbers of those that disappeared at the Reserve Bank. No interest coupons from the missing certificates have been presented for payment.

No one — neither the member bank involved, the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, nor the Treasury Department — has sustained any financial loss. Furthermore, there is no possibility of financial loss except in the unlikely event that one of these certificates or coupons is presented for payment; even then, the chances of loss would depend on the circumstances under which presentment is made.

SECURITY AND CONTROL PROCEDURES

The investigations made in connection with the disappearance of the certificates included a careful review of the Reserve Bank's established procedures for the handling and safekeeping of securities. Such procedures appeared to be basically sound, with adequate internal control provisions. It might be helpful to summarize some of these procedures by way of illustration.

The approaches to all restricted areas, including the vault, are controlled by armed guards at all times the vault is open. To gain admittance to such an area a person must present proper credentials or otherwise be recognized by the guard as one authorized to have access to the area. The door to the vault itself is secured by two combination locks, one combination being held by designated officers and the other by certain other officers and designated senfor employees. It is also controlled by a time device and is electronically tied into the San Francisco Police Department which would be automatically alerted by any tampering with the door. Guards are on duty in the Bank 24 hours a day.

The main vault door remains open during the Bank's regular working hours. However, the entrance to the vault is also secured by a steel grille which is kept locked at all times. An armed guard is stationed at this location while the vault is open and, if a person wishes to enter the vault proper, the guard must unlock the grille door for him.

The interior of the vault is divided into compartments by steel bar partitions. Each compartment door has two combination locks and no person may hold both combinations. The securities in the vault are in the joint custody of two custodians. Men assigned to securities custodies are mature, experienced employees of the highest caliber who have shown judgment and care in other previous assignments. The securities are held in chests or drawers within the large compartments, and each such chest or drawer has two combinations or locks. Each custodian knows only one of the combinations or holds only one of the keys.

Securities that come into or are withdrawn from the vault are received and delivered through a small window in the steel partition. At the time of a receipt, the vault custodians accept the securities from a securities teller and each of them makes a verification of the securities and a receipt is given to the teller. When a withdrawal is made, the securities teller presents a requisition which is inspected by the vault custodians for proper authorization. A description of the securities and the particular account from which they are to be withdrawn are specified on the requisition. The securities are then withdrawn from the envelope in which they have been held, are verified by count by each custodian, and handed to the securities teller, who in turn makes a verification of the securities and gives a receipt to the custodians before he leaves their presence.

The vault custodians enter all transactions in a vault journal provided for the purpose, and as previously stated, also makes appropriate entries on the particular envelopes in which the securities are deposited or from which they are withdrawn.

When securities are initially received in the Bank either via registered mail or by messenger delivery, they are verified by a securities teller who issues a receipt in manifold copies. One copy becomes an advice to accompany the securities when they are placed in the vault and another copy is forwarded to the Fiscal Department for recording in the securities liability ledgers maintained by that department as an independent control. Similarly, on deliveries of securities out of the Reserve Bank, a manifold accounting form is prepared, one copy of which becomes the requisition delivered to the vault custodians as outlined above. Another copy goes to the Fiscal Department to become the basis for an entry in the control ledgers. Each day the balances in the control accounts maintained in the Fiscal Department are verified with the balance totals computed by the vault custodians. In addition the vault custodians are required to piece count all securities in their custody and verify against the envelope total once in each 3-month period.

Each Reserve Bank has an internal auditing department which is independent of the operating functions in the Bank. The auditing department makes at least two complete audits of securities holdings each year. In the course of such audits, a detailed count is made of the securities in the vault and statements of the holdings are sent to the respective owners with the request that they check such statements against their records and confirm their accuracy to the auditors. In the course of each audit, the procedures of the department under audit are reviewed and any suggestions for improvement, either in form or execution, are noted and brought to the attention of the Bank's management for appropriate action.

The most recent regular audit of the securities vault of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco prior to August 8, 1962, had been made by the auditing Department on May 23, 1962, at which time the certificates in question were ascertained to be in the envelope containing the collateral pledged by the member bank for loans, discounts, and advances.

The examining staff of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System also makes a complete examination of every Reserve Bank and Branch each year, and such examination includes a verification of the securities holdings and confirmation with the owners of record, an appraisal of the internal controls, and an observation of employee performance.

Although not formalized in the Reserve Bank's written manual of procedures, it was the practice for the vault custodians when making transfers of securities between envelopes to verify the securities to the total brought froward from the old envelope and to examine the old envelope to insure that all securities had been removed prior to discarding it. In view of the facts developed in the investigation, the Reserve Bank's manual has been amended to include the following specific instructions:

"When it is necessary to transfer securities to a new security envelope because the posting space on the old envelope is filled or for other reasons, these securities should be counted and recorded by issue and denomination on Form LLM 168 and immediately placed in the new envelope. The total of the securities counted as shown on Form LLM 168 should be proved to the last total appearing on the old envelope, and should then be posted to the new envelope. Form LLM 168 should be filed with the securities in the new envelope and retained until the envelope is discarded as provided herein. The old envelope should be completely slit along the seams, opened and inspected to determine that all securities have been removed, and retained in the securities vault until completion of the next Head Office audit, immediately after which it should be discarded."

In addition, the envelopes used for containing securities now have holes punched in them, so spaced as to provide a visual check that all securities have been removed.

The investigation also indicated that the vault custodians were under pressure from a heavy workload, and that this fact may have contributed to the probable failure to comply with standard procedures in this instance. The Reserve Bank has since reduced the scope of work assigned to the vault custodians.

PERFORMANCE OF RESERVE BANKS IN SAFEKEEPING OF SECURITIES

A few figures may give some idea of the size of the Reserve Banks' activities in handling securities in various capacities. At the close of 1962 the total value of negotiable securities held in custody by the Reserve Banks was about $280 billion. At the head office of the San Francisco Reserve Bank alone it was about $11 billion. These figures include only the securities held for others; they do not include any assets held for the Reserve Bank's own account.

To cite another example — in 1962, the issue, redemption, and exchange of negotiable U.S. Government securities by the Reserve Banks as fiscal agents for the Treasury required the handling of more than 10 million pieces with a face value in excess of $605 billion. This, if course, is only one segment of the total securities operations of the Federal Reserve Banks.

The record of the past 10 years shows the Reserve Banks have handled this huge volume of negotiable securities without any financial loss. Moreover, in this period there have been only three instances, including the one at San Francisco, where negotiable securities have disappeared at a Reserve Bank, even without any resulting financial loss.

One was discovered in the course of an audit made as of August 13, 1962, of the head office of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. The certificate missing at Richmond was also a Treasury certificate of Indebtedness, 3¼ percent, Series B — 1963, dated May 15, 1962, and due May 15, 1963. It was of $100,000 denomination and bore serial number 15496. It had also been pledged by the owning bank as Treasury tax and loan collateral. When the certificate could not be located, a new certificate was issued to the pledgor bank, the various parties at interest were notified and both the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the U.S. Secret Service investigated the case. The investigations tended to indicate that the certificate became mixed with trash which was destroyed, and there was no indication of any breach of trust by any employee. The semiannual interest coupon due November 15, 1962, was not presented for payment.

The other was a case at the head office of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta which was disclosed in the course of the annual examination of that bank as of February 19, 1954, by examiners for the Board of Governors. In the verification of the securities held by the bank on examination date, it was ascertained that the canceled stock of Treasury issues for which the Reserve Bank was accountable to the Treasury Department did not include $101,000 Certificates of Indebtedness, Series C — 1954, dated July 15, 1953, and due March 22, 1954. The missing certificates were further identified as one in the denomination of $100,000, bearing serial number 5058, and another in the denomination of $1,000, bearing serial number 3440. These securities, according to the records, were retired and canceled in connection with a wire transfer of an equivalent amount through the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. The investigations made at that time indicated that the certificates fell or were accidentally brushed off the desk of the vault custodian or the assistant vault custodian into a trash basket and disposed of as waste paper. They never turned up, and the Treasury Department authorized an adjustment in the Reserve Bank's accountability to it to close the matter.

From A Librarian's Notebook

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

We have a big thing going with our Saturday morning story hours. Using the characters from the good old "Oz" books, the Children's Librarian, with some excellent help from her husband, constructed a Tin Woodman and a Scarecrow as props. After which we painted a yellow brick road, and added a couple of live characters to the show. It went off very well, and will give the story sessions added zest. Thoses of us who were literally raised on the "Oz" books love every minute of it. The story hours are stressing fairy tales this year for we believe that these delightful stories add imagination to life and a stimulant to the minds of the youngsters who listen to them. So, hi-ho for the merry old Land of Oz!

From children, we go to the retired person and offer a book by Clarence B. Randall entitled Sixty Five Plus, The Joy And Challenge of The Years of Retirement. The author retired as president of a large steel company, and was soon called to Washington as one of Eisenhower's excutive assistants. He believes that men should begin to prepare for retirement in their forties so that when the actual time arrives, they will be ready with minds adjusted and retirement activities begun.

In the same vein, we have Add Life to Your Years by doctors Boas and Boas, a father and son team who specialize in geriatrics. They discuss the various disturbances of the aging process, such as arthritis, diseases of the heart and arteries, the eyes and ears, and so on, finally ending with a discussion of euthanasia. It is an interesting book, and with due respect for the persons who would be especially interested in it, the print and spacing are easy on the eyes.

We have another book in a related field which is called The Discovery of Anaesthesia by L. J. Ludovici. It seems that anaesthesia was discovered by a man named Morton but a psychopathic doctor named Jackson stole credit for the discovery and eventually caused the real discovery to die in poverty, broken and unappreciated. Ludovici spent years collecting the material for this book which it was predicted would cause him to lose faith in mankind.

Herod The Great is the story of the life and times of that Herod who was king when the star appeared over Bethlehem. It was written by William Gross. An interesting feature of the book is a geneological chart which shows the generations of Herod and the peculiar tendency of the time for persons in the ruling classes to marry their close relatives.

And since this is the first of the month, happy, happy, happy, and payday is here, the final book for the week is How To Have More Money To Spend by B. J. Blaustein. This is the how to get out of debt and stay out of debt type of thing. There must be a way! Read this book and learn about that way. I hope.

There is a flock of novels this week and one of them is a rare bird with this library, a western by Peter Field. Patrons who read westerns are pretty rare, too. It must be that the desire for them is largely satisfied by television. That from a "Rawhide" fan!

DEERLY BELOVED?

The California Fish and Game Commission adopted 29 antlerless or either-sex deer hunts for 1963 at a regular meeting in Los Angeles. The 29 hunts involve a total of 9,890 permits.

Permits for 26 of the hunts will be selected by a statewide drawing. Two of the hunts are for military personnel only, and the Los Angeles archery hunt requires no permit, but does require a valid unused 1963 deer tag.

Applications for the special hunt permits must be made on the form attached to the 1963 deer tags. These tags are available from license agents throughout the state. A map showing the boundaries of each hunt will be available from license agents about the end of July.

Each applicant must be 12 years of age or over and must possess a valid 1963-64 hunting license. Applicants may file only one application, and may indicate their first and second choices.

The second choice will be used only where there are insufficient first choice applications to fill the authorized quota of permits for a hunt, and the second choice will be used only after the drawing is made and the quota filled for the hunt of the Nimrod's first choice.

The Department of Fish and Game urged all applicants to designate the CORRECT NAME OF THE HUNT on their applications.

All applications must be mailed to the DFG's License Section, 1325-A "K" Street, Sacramento.

Following are the hunts approved by the Commission in our area:

Hunter Liggett — Monterey County — Anterless deer — 200 permit — Sept. 28-Sept.29.

Camp Roberts (2 periods) — Monterey, San Luis Obispo — Period 1, 65 Anterless, Sept. 28-Sept. 29.

Period 2, 60 Anterless, Oct. 5-Oct. 6.

San Luis Obispo — San Luis Obispo County — Anterless deer—500 permit — Sept. 28.-Oct. 6.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

Communion services will be held on Sunday at First Church of Christ, Scientist, Carmel, and all other Christian Science branch churches throughout the world. The First Reader will read the church tenets and will invite the congregation to kneel in silent communion.

The Bible Lesson on "Sacrament" will include this verse: "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God" (Matt. 5).

Among selections from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be this: "We should examine ourselves and learn what is the affection and purpose of the heart, for in this way only can we learn what we honestly are" (p. 8).

SENATOR FARR REPORTS

The Senate Transporation Committee killed both my billboard bill and that of Assemblyman Z'Berg. It was most regretable that despite public urgence for the adoption of reasonable billboard control legislation, our attempts were again thwarted by billboard lobbyists. The tide is running in favor of billboard regulation on the State level. There is much to be said and will be said about those who continue to thwart the public interest in this subject.

I am pleased to say that the Legislature did adopt my Scenic Highway legislation providing a Mastera Plan for Scenic Highways of some 5,000 miles throughout our State, and also establishing the method for designating certain highways in the State system as "Official State Scenic Highways" when county government has taken the steps to protect the scenic corridor adjacent to the State highway from unsightly development in scenic areas.

The attmepts to kill the scenic highway bill on the last day that Senate bills could be passed out of our house was most interesting. This measure, S.B. 1647, won unanimous approval before both the Senate Transportation and Senate Finance Committee. It was up for third reading and final passage in the Senate, when during my absence from the Senate floor because of attending a meeting of the Education Committee, one of my colleagues moved the bill back to the Senate Finance Committee where he managed to kill the bill. We finally managed to reverse this action on the Senate floor and to get the bill restored to the Senate Third Reading File, after which it won Senate approval. The measure had no trougle in the Assembly when it went on the consent file, and it is now on Governor Brown's desk awaiting his signature.

I was gratified at the legislative acceptance of my foreign teacher exchange program which will permit up to 500 bilingual California teachers to be sent abroad to improve their language skills; permit up to 500 bilingual to be brought in from foreign countries to teach in our California schools, and permit limited credentials after special instruction to be granted for a one-year period to persons, foreign born or otherwise, who have great proficiency in languages. The legislation is contingent upon the enactment of supporting legislation now before the Congress. It is estimated that we will have a deficiency of some 4500 qualified foreign language teachers by 1965 when the Casey Act goes into effect requiring the teaching of foreign languages commencing in the 6th grade.

An amendment which I placed in an other legislators' bill, with his consent, will protect Monterey County's coastline from off-shore oil exploration within the three-mile limit.

My S.B. 513, approved in this session, is aimed at curbing fraudulent solicitation for charitable purposes and makes it a crime to misrepresent the purposes for which money is being solicited for alleged charities. This measure is aimed at protecting our many worthwhile charities and weedinng out the phonies.

Other bills of mine approved by the Legislature include: Removal of State bounty on mountain lions for 4 years; provision that fully qualified children (with the permission of their parents) be eligible for admission to the first grade at 5 years, rather than 5 years and 9 months; establishing a protected underwater marine refuge for Pacific Grove; permit the taking of shrimp by traps in the Carmel and Monterey Bay; providing for recount in all rather than a selected type of school elections; providing a resolution for a thorough study by our Senate Judiciary Committee of Mechanics Lien Law; enabling the State to take title to the magnificent Marks family gift of 10,000 acres of land for a State Park near Aptos. Other bills I introduced and which were enacted provide for a procedure for the designation of Official County Scenic Highways and permitting the State to acquire gifts of land or money for scenic mothorial overlooks adjacent to State highways.

Letters . . . to The Editor

Dear Editor:

This past Sunday, June 23rd, I viewed a performance of the Ballet de Patrice production of Swan Lake at the Pacific Grove Junior High School. As performed by some 70 local children, of ages 3 to 15, it was an exciting afternoon. The quality of the production; the costumes, and the sets, were most impressive. The talent and the discipline of these children performing classic ballet was a moving experience. Four performances of this tasteful production seemed inadequate for something that required 2 years of preparation.

Being a professional film editor, the thought occurred to me that it might be an excellent idea to record on color motion picture film, with sound and music, this amazing production of the Swan Lake Ballet.

I have at my disposal facilities for turning out a finished film suitable for showings in various cultural outlets such as schools and colleges, or for motion picture theatres and telecastings.

Financial backing is needed to cover the cost of the 16 milimeter color film, the processing of the film, and the sound recording.

It is my belief that this is a worthy undertaking, and that the end result could only reflect great credit on those associated with it.

Any inquiries may be directed at me at the Motion Picture Signal Section of CDEC at Fort Ord.

Yours very truly,
Robert Lauritzen

I recall your appeal for help some weeks ago so that you could give news coverage on Carmel's Little League and the Farm Teams weekly activities in your paper. Your appeal fell on deaf ears. I personally have spoken on this to an official of our Little League, but my words fell by the wayside also, with a remark that some parent should take that end over.

Unless some action is taken and the Little League management group accepts responsibility for all phases of a program there never will be any news for you to print about our boys who go out each week and play their hearts out. Publicity is just as much a responsibility of any program as getting funds, players and publishing schedules.

The other Leagues — Carmel Valley — Monterey and Seaside are organized for publicity and each game played has been duly covered in the Monterey Peninsula Herald.

There were many fine games played in the Carmel League but who knows about them — only those who happened to be there.

These boys are human and like to read about their achievements, as well as many proud parents.

Lets get started on something and make the Little League management assume the responsibility of publicity and get the material to you so that it can be published.

It can be done with very little effort.

east, and the sea to the west, is a new home for Mr. and Mrs. Gary Hudson of Coast Road. The house, designed by Mark Mills of Carmel, a student of the Frank Lloyd school, and being built by Pacific Grove builder Ross Wallace, was planned for the special needs of painter-artist Gary Hudson and Mrs. Hudson, and is situated on its own two and one half acre site so that it is sheltered from south winds and rains and has a commanding view of the ridges of the Santa Lucias to the east and Highway One to the north.

LAW IN ACTION

SPARE THE TREE

Our laws have long protected trees. A landowner, for example, can collect treble damages from a trespasser who cuts down trees, not his own, a kind of civil penalty against such a trespasser.

Judges do not levy the treble damages unless the trespasser acted with malice. Otherwise they make him repay only actual losses.

In a recent case Mrs. Jones an elderly widow, owned some land with a stand of trees. Her son looked after the land, but now and then he would let a neighbor, Charles Cutter, chop down some of the trees.

Mrs. Jones sold the land to the Smiths. Though Charlie knew of the sale, he nevertheless cut down some trees without permission.

The Smiths told him to quit, but he went ahead anyhow and cut down some more trees. Smith sued and got the treble damages, since Cutter had been malicious.

It is a crime to cut or steal another's trees. It is a most serious crime to set fire to them whether in parks, public lands, or along the streets. As a rule, the landowner has no claim to the trees along his street; they belong to the city.

You and your neighbor own jointly the trees that overlap on your land and his. Hence neither you nor he can legally cut down such a tree without the other's permission.

But you can cut trees as well as roots and branches that protrude over on to your land. You can sue to make your neighbor pay for damage the tree does, as well as to abate the nuisance. But you cannot legally go on to his land to trim the tree without his permission.

The tree owner—whether a private person or the government—has the duty to see that it does not project on to the public land so as to hinder traffic or harm people or property. The government must keep its trees along the roadside trimmed and properly wired and supported, so as not to fall on people in normal winds. Private owners are liable if they do not take proper care of their trees as well.

Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.

The word abundance is derived from the Roman word "abundare," meaning "to overflow" and was applied to anything plentiful. (Like the contents of a pair of stretch pants?).

Many of our modern highways follow the same trails blazed by early pioneers, paths used by Indians or routes stamped out by migrating buffalo herds. (And seem to be used for much the same purpose today).

ABOUT TOURISTS, VISITORS, AND THE LOCALS

TOURISTS . . . Tourists are people in cameras, aloha shirts and/or muu-muus. They have come to look at us out of a sense of duty, as a part of seeing America first, and see us primarily as quaint pages in their scrapbooks or as frames on their moving picture screens. They prefer neon lights, sidewalks and street addresses. They do talk about returning on some future vacation, but of course, you wouldn't want to live in that kooky town. They can't find our office.

VISITORS . . . On the other hand, Visitors are non-residents who come to see us frequently because they have a continuing love affair with our Village and our ocean. They actually walk on our beaches, buy things in our shops, and only the sheer impracticality of uprooting themselves from their present business elsewhere prevents their becoming Locals. They always stop to see us when they are here.

LOCALS . . . Locals are people who, through the kind permission of the Gods, live in Carmel permanently. They walk on the beaches when the tourists are gone and the sun isn't. They shop when the shops aren't crowded, and they even know where to find a parking place. They have lived all over the world and have chosen Carmel for their permanent way of life. They use their library cards, play instruments, paint pictures, or make things, or appreciate those who do. They have all the virtues—are kind, good, sweet and pure. If your dog gets lost, you hope he was found by a Local.

LIKE TO BECOME A LOCAL? We'd be happy to interview you and, if you qualify, would consider it a privilege to help you find a home here. Finding our office is the first test.
